Castiglione delle Stiviere, a town of about 30,000 inhabitants on the moraine hills, is known for its ties to the Gonzaga family and its patron saint, Saint Aloysius Gonzaga. The idea of the International Red Cross was born here, thanks to Henry Dunant's experience during the Battle of Solferino, which is now documented in the Red Cross Museum. Distinguished by its unique historical and urban heritage in the province of Mantua, it also offers excellent food and wine and sports opportunities, with renowned golf courses and equestrian facilities.
